Marshall – East Texas Heritage, Small-Town Community, Regional Influence – read on to learn more about this opportunity!

ABOUT THE COMMUNITY

Marshall, Texas, is a thriving community located in the heart of East Texas, just two hours east of Dallas, three hours north of Houston, and 45 minutes west of Shreveport. With a population of 23,392, Marshall serves as the county seat of Harrison County (population 66,553).

The City has invested in downtown redevelopment, infrastructure improvements, and cultural programming, and the downtown district is anchored by a lively Main Street featuring local shops, restaurants, and year-round events. Marshall was first designated an official Texas Main Street City in 1982, reflecting its long-running commitment to historic downtown revitalization.

Marshall is nationally recognized for its historic architecture: its downtown and surrounding neighborhoods form one of the largest National Historic Landmark districts in the small-urban category, with historic structures that showcase nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century styles.

Marshall has also been honored as an All-America City twice, a recognition of the community's civic achievements and collaborative initiatives. Tourism plays an important role in Marshall's identity. The city hosts the nationally known Wonderland of Lights festival each winter and promotes heritage tourism tied to its Main Street, museums, and historic sites.

Major employers include Eastman Chemical Company, Trinity Industries, and Christus Good Shepherd Medical Center. Education is anchored by the Marshall Independent School District and supported by local higher-education institutions such as East Texas Baptist University, Wiley College, Texas State Technical College–Marshall, and Panola College.

GOVERNANCE & ORGANIZATION

Marshall is a home-rule city operating under a council-manager form of government. The City Council has seven members, including the Mayor, serving staggered four-year terms. The Council appoints a professional City Manager to oversee day-to-day operations and more than 250 employees.

The City provides a full range of services including:

- Finance, Human Resources, and IT
- Police and Fire Services
